Cosmos of knowledge
To hear, to write an read Humanistica at monasteries in the late middle ages and early modern times

In a context of the high discussed theological questions, in 1403 Rosenheim and Seyringer left the university of Vienna and came to Subiaco; and there starts a century of high density in transmission of monastic and humanistic knowledge.

At the catalogue of Melk Monastery of 1517 we can get a very close look to the cosmos of knowledge; edged and determined by monastic reading on the one, by humanistic interests caused by the network between monastery and university on the other hand.
